

Tresament of Jean Meslier

My brothers, you know my disinterestedness. I do not sacrifice my beliefs to any low interest. If I could have done it with impunity, I would rather have enlightened you. You can testify to the truth of what I say. I did not degrade my ministry by asking for the remuneration attached to it. What contempt I felt for my ministry, and particularly for the superstitious mass and the ridiculous administration of the sacraments, especially when they had to be carried out with a solemnity that attracted your piety and excited your credulity? A thousand times I was on the point of publicly exploding. I wanted to open your eyes, but a fear stronger than my strength suddenly held me back, and forced me to remain silent until my death. The Sentiments of Jean Meslier Addressed to his parishioners on a part of the abuses and errors in general and particular. Jean Meslier was a French Catholic priest who was discovered, upon his death, to have written a book-length philosophical essay promoting atheism. Described by the author as his testament to his parishioners, the text denounces all religion.
